The Windrush's journey May-June 1948

This year's theme, “Honouring Our Communities. It is about recognising individuals whose contributions are part of everyday life, yet too often go unseen. For many years, Black History Month has rightly celebrated notable figures whose achievements have changed the course of history. That recognition remains important. But history is not only made in moments of visibility. It is built over time, through consistent acts of care, leadership and responsibility

We have invited inspirational speakers from our local community to talk to the children about their lives and achievements.
